Love story with a Dharmic Twist

‘This wedding will go down as the finest I’ve attended in my life,’ Vidushi declared to Vinay.

‘Seriously yaar, what a couple...Neha ne toh, won my heart. Thanks a lot for bringing me here. After all the things I went through, I began to think that the eternal kind of true love stories, where mutual respect and acceptance of each other dominates, was limited to movies. But after coming here, I realized such unconditional love stories do exist in real life. Waise, you know, this kind of love story was one of the prime reasons that motivated me to plant more and more trees.’

‘Are you talking about Mr. Haprit Aiten?’

‘You knew it?’ Vidushi asked in utter amazement as her eyes widened. ‘You knew it all along!’

‘You received the first prize in the 2004 debate from him,’ Vinay explained casually with folded hands. ‘He stated that he was on a mission to plant as many trees as possible when he was asked to address the gathering. With a bit more digging, I found out that he had a love marriage. He was planting trees as it was his wife’s dream. Also, he never remarried after her demise. And his life’s purpose became to fulfill her dream to the extent possible by him.’

‘And here I am, a certified duffer, who was under the impression that I’ve done a great job in keeping it a secret,’ Vidushi said, still unable to recover from the shock of Vinay finding the exact reason behind her planting trees and telling her about it only now.

‘Moreover, you believed that planting trees like him may also get you the prince of your dream who will love you as much as Mr. Aiten loved his wife,’ Vinay explained further.

‘Incredible guess bey,’ Vidushi said with her jaw dropped now.

‘Just connected the dots.’

A Thing Called Destiny

Hello Everyone!

Vidushi went on to plant trees in the hope of getting a loving and caring husband. Many consider this train of thought silly.

Have you done anything insanely crazy or weird to get something that you desperately wanted?

I hope you would have heard about Operation Sambhav by now. But how much do you exactly know about the one who is actually executing it: Vinay?

Won't you like to know something about him?

You can find it here:
